GO AT TEACHING. "POME," BY JEROME

Of all the ways

The dimes to raise.

By labor or by "leeching,"
No trade is used
That is abused

So much as that of Teaching:
Why, bless you, took!
There is the cook,
The County Board beseeching—
The luxy lass
Obtains a "pass,"
And, straightway, goes at Teaching!

The plow-boy'g ses, From 'mid curn-rows,
And says ho'd follow preaching,
But friends all think
He'd make more "chink".
If he would go at Teaching!
The arrant knave,
To vice, a slave,
And used to overreaching,
Conceals his hame
And former fame,
And plays a game at Teaching.

Oh, what a trade
Would ours be made,
If all who have an itching
For something new,
And Exsy, too,
Could only go at Teaching!
But, thanks to laws,
Our noble cause Our noble cause

Is every year upreaching;

Here the "mews finde" and the most valuable pe ion of the contemplated "pome" was lost,

> [From Godey's Lady's Book. THE MARCH SNOW-STORM. Gently as lillies shed their leaves

When summer days are fair,
The feathery snow comes fleating down
Like blossoms on the sir;
And o'er the world, like angel's wing
Unfolding soft and white,
It broads above the brown sere earth,
And fills with forms of light
The dead and desolate domain
Where winter holds his iron reign.
